What are Assistive Listening Devices (a.k.a. ALDs)?

Assistive Listening Devices (ALDs) are amplification instruments that are designed to be helpful in specific listening situations. For instance, there are ALDs that amplify the TV, the telephone, and public speakers, as well as ALDs that alert the hearing impaired to environmental sounds, such as the doorbell or smoke detector. Hearing aids, which also amplify sound, are instruments that can be used in all listening situations. But because a hearing aid is an all-purpose instrument, it may not be as successful in each and every specific application. Assistive Listening Devices can help in these special situations to make hearing easier.
